I've tried V8i.12, V8i.13, V8i.13a, V8i.14 and V8i.14a with all version of winzip. I have dl the zipped data with V8i.12, V8i.13, V8i.13a and V8i.14. I have unzipped the files into the drive without success.Anybody? Do you just download the.zip file and then install it? That didn't work for me. I downloaded the preloads from a torrent site. I then downloaded the.zip file from another site and installed that. I copied the microsoft.com.zip file into

Field of the Invention This invention relates to a method for producing a compound semiconductor active element. II. Description of the Prior Art The term compound semiconductor refers to a solid which is the composite of two or more substances and is hereinafter referred to as a compound when there is no fear of confusion. In this specification, a semiconductor is also referred to as a conductor or a conductive material. As compound semiconductors, not only telluride semiconductors composed of Te and one of the elements of Group IV, i.e., Se, S, Te, etc. (hereinafter referred to as Te-Group IV) but also silicon semiconductors composed of Si and one of the elements of Group III, i.e., Al, Ga, In, etc., as well as gallium nitride semiconductors (GaN), zinc selenide semiconductors (ZnSe), etc. are included. For the production of these compound semiconductors, a vapor phase growth process such as molecular beam epitaxy (MBE), metalorganic chemical vapor deposition (MOCVD), etc. is generally used. The vapor phase growth process is a method of vapor-phase-growing a single crystal on a cooling substrate or a hot substrate maintained at a temperature of from about 300.degree. to about 1100.degree. C. by using compounds of metal, etc. as a material which is deposited in vapor phase on the heated substrate. In order to produce compound semiconductor active elements such as LEDs, etc., on a substrate, for example, as disclosed in U.S. Pat. No. 4,419,981, which was granted on Dec. 13, 1983 ba244e880a
