However, since the antigens expressed by different kinds of tumor cells are not identical, the resulting immunoglobulin produced by such immunization methods are not always specific for an antigen which is (over-)expressed on a tumor cell, and often cross-react with one or more antigens which are over-expressed on normal cells. The difficulties in producing immunoglobulins which are specific for tumor antigen-bearing cells may be exacerbated when the tumor antigen-bearing cells are not malignant or have a very low mitotic rate. When an antibody immunospecific for a tumor antigen is used as a diagnostic agent, it would be extremely helpful if the antibody also has tumor-specific properties. It is therefore a problem in the art to have methods by which a therapeutic agent is produced which is specific for a tumor antigen expressed on the tumor cell, and which is also specific for the tumor and not cross-reactive with antigens expressed on normal cells.Thousands of European migrants have been flooding in to Calais to try and get to the UK as part of the so-called 'Jungle' camp, which has since been demolished.
