Which country is considered to be the most corrupt in the world? and why? China Cause: It has to do with control over resources and the way that the government decides how a country's money is spent. Corruption in China can be thought of as the result of the government being reluctant to allow foreign companies to invest in China's resources, and the government having no qualms about allowing corrupt officials to take advantage of foreigners in the form of bribes and kickbacks. Russia Cause: The way that the Russian government is run is open for all kinds of corruptions. One of the most obvious is that the president and his cronies don't care about the people's problems. They only care about their own. 2. In a novel, the author uses the kind of phrases to highlight the main character that are able to describe the characteristics of the protagonist of the book? "She was a force to be reckoned with, a woman who could bring him to heel, a woman who had a will of steel and a mind of ivory." 3. Which one is not a realistic idea, however powerful? The idea that power corrupts is a realistic one; the hard work and dedication of people who have to climb to the top and win over people to support them will inevitably cause corruption to happen
