What's in a name? With such a mature product as Photoshop, it's helpful to know the names of the various programs within Photoshop that you can select to open an image file and manipulate it. Most of the people who purchase Photoshop know that the program is simply called Photoshop. But, you may not know that you can use the application to open multiple files, layer them, adjust them, paint within them, save them as other files, and export them for publication or web posting. The Photoshop moniker is just an app title. It's a colloquialism that's come to mean the same as being "photogenic," which is the opposite of "not photogenic." In the following sections, I give you an overview of all the major Photoshop tools and how they work. I don't try to cover every single aspect of the tools. Instead, I give you the highlights of what's available in each tool, as well as a basic tutorial that shows you how to use the tool.

I have been told that I have a low cholesterol level, but my doctor gave me medicine to lower it. I don't know what type of medicine he gave me. I have been taking the medication for 2 or 3 months. I am taking 20 mg every other day. I took my last dose 3 weeks ago. This morning I woke up with this lump on my neck. It was not there when I took my last dose. I am very worried. Has anyone else experienced this? It feels like a fat lump. I guess my medicine worked. It doesn't hurt, I don't have any symptoms of a blood clot, but I want to get this checked out. I have heard that your cholesterol level can go down without any medication. Dixie Demerger-C 01-25-2012 03:08 PM
Re: Lump on neck [QUOTE=Jennifer;806572]I have been told that I have a low cholesterol level, but my doctor gave me medicine to lower it. I don't know what type of medicine he gave me. I have heard that your cholesterol level can go down without any medication. [/QUOTE I don't know what medication you were given but if it was a statin (HMG-CoA reductase inhibitor) like Lescol, Mevacor, Pravachol, Zetia, or Zocor, it would never lower your cholesterol by itself. Even if you "succeeded" with that medication, your LDL would naturally come down as your body had to metabolize the cholesterol in your liver (they remove a lot and use it for themselves, it is a natural function). Read here to learn what that is all about. Since you woke up with a lump, I suggest you go to your GP immediately, just in case. SusanS

in a preferred embodiment. To operate the flow conditioning apparatus according to a further embodiment of the present invention, the position of the second valve is actuated at a position between the inlet port and the outlet port. The position of the first valve is also actuated at a position between the first port and the inlet port. In this manner, fluid passing through the flow conditioning apparatus is routed in either the first path, or in the second path. In a preferred embodiment, a system is provided for reducing the temperature of a blood product downstream of a blood processing apparatus. The system includes a flow conditioning apparatus, a means for sensing a temperature of the blood product downstream of the flow conditioning apparatus, a means for controlling the flow conditioning apparatus to either reduce a temperature of the blood product by cycling between the first path and the second path, or to maintain a temperature of the blood product by maintaining the second valve at a closed position, and a means for automatically opening the second valve to let fluid flow into the first port. In this manner, one embodiment of the present invention automatically senses the temperature of the blood product downstream of the flow conditioning apparatus, and appropriately actuates the flow conditioning apparatus to adjust its operation, or to return the temperature of the blood product to a predetermined set point. In a preferred embodiment, the blood processing apparatus is a continuous flow cell separator, such as a continuous flow centrifugal cell separator. A system is also provided for heat exchange upstream of the flow conditioning apparatus. The system includes a means for sensing a temperature of the blood product flowing upstream of the flow conditioning apparatus, and a means for adjusting the heat exchange. By using the flow conditioning apparatus of the present invention, a system for conditioning a blood product on the fly is provided. In one embodiment, a system is provided which automatically adjusts the flow conditioning apparatus when a predetermined temperature set point is reached. In this manner, the temperature of the blood product can be automatically adjusted, without need for operator intervention. One aspect of the present invention is a flow conditioning apparatus for conditioning a fluid. In one embodiment, the flow conditioning apparatus comprises first, second and third ports. The first port is a first fluid inlet port, and the third port is a first fluid outlet port. The second port is a second fluid inlet port, and the third port is a second fluid outlet port. In one embodiment, the first fluid inlet port is located downstream of the first fluid outlet port, and the second fluid inlet port is located
