The National Zoological Park - a beautiful emblem of the natural beauty and diversity of wildlife of the surrounding area of the city and a rare showcase for nature. Under an acacia tree outside the large entrance of the park, a dozen beautiful butterflies lay in peace. Thus, in the evening, these beautiful faces are all bathed by the light of the setting sun. In the summer, the animals are showered with heavy clouds, and an air of mystery prevails over the park. The Milky Way is delicately tracing a stripe in the sky and at night, the stars shine so brightly that you can hardly look away from them. Flower collections at the Natural History Museum, the largest in the world, the stuffed animals in the Museum of Natural History, and the collection of salamanders in the Reptile House make the park into a museum. In the evening, the animals are showing an extended set of splendid colors on their wings. The skyscrapers of the city are lit up. The huge, gleaming plant of the Orangerie is reflecting so much light that it seems to be glowing by itself. In the park, the animals are busy doing things they usually do not do; catching insects, sunbathing, and eating. Are you busy doing the same things when you leave your computer or smartphone idle? Turn off or turn it off and on again. What to do: 1) The screensaver activates automatically after you exit from an application, pause a game or when the monitor goes idle. You can also activate it when you turn the computer off. To activate the screensaver, press the Windows key + Q. 2) You can specify the screen saver to start only on a specific application.

Press the Windows key + Q and the letter "s" to open the system settings. Click on "Windows", then click on "screensaver". From there, you can choose the "screen saver options". To activate the screensaver when you close the application, press the Windows key + Q and click on "screensaver settings" and then choose "When screen saver is closed". 3) You can configure the screen saver to come on a certain application and then to turn off the screen saver again. For this, open the configuration program. From there, click on "start" and start the "Programs and Features". Click on "Control Panel", then click on have a div inside a panel and the panel is inside a sticky footer. When someone clicks anywhere, or anywhere inside the div I want it to trigger something. My issue is that when the user clicks outside the div, the click event triggers. I tried setting a mouseup event for the whole page and then use preventDefault() to stop the click event from triggering but this doesn't work either. How do I stop the click event from triggering when the user clicks outside the div? A: Use e.stopPropogation(): document.body.addEventListener('click', function(e){ if (!e.target.matches('div')) e.stopPropagation();
