The latest version of Subsonic, version 1.9.0, contains a batch code for v1.2.3. This information was posted in the Subsonic discussion forum on Monday. The batch was announced as being for current and new users, but there was no further information given. From what I can gather, it seems to be a major release with a lot of added features and not just for current users. I have a short look at the changelog: * Restore the default Subsonic behavior, including the save and load dialog, * Revert a few changes including their "index folders" and "folder references" * Add "clear storage on exit" to the settings, * Add "media storage location" to the settings, * Add system tray icon, * Add "hotkey to control the system tray", * Add several configuration options to the settings (not listed here), * Add multiple subdirectories support, * Add lossless media support, * Add Windows 8 support, * Add lock file support, * Add lossless support for recording files, * Add error reporting, * Add bandpass filter and amplitude, * Add smooth faded windows (for exit and minimize), * Add tabbed control, * And much, much more... Make your site look more like a game. Game Site Kit gives developers the tools needed to make a custom game website that makes your game more visible to gamers. Use a browser-based window to display game information for your own or other users to see or play. Make friends with others and get their opinion, gain votes with multi-player campaigns, get in-game currency and account information, and more. Have a Great Day! If you like it, please rate it too!
