===== Madleets JScan provides recommendations how to fix found vulnerabilities. These recommendations are based on the so called CSS Security Level. Every CSS-Section of your website can have a CSS Security Level. CSS is a language which is used to define the web page look and Feel. CSS provides you the opportunity to define the look and feel of your website (the colours and the pictures). On top of that CSS defines how responsive your website must be. CSS Level 1 provides no security but CSS Level 2 increases the security possibilities by letting you define more strict rules. You can define strict rules for each and every single CSS section of your site. This lets you find possible problems faster. Madleets JScan detects as it is the name suggests only vulnerabilities in the CSS files. With Madleets JScan you can define where you want to search for vulnerabilities, as you probably want to look for vulnerabilities only in a specific subfolder of your site, then you can create a rule and change the CSS Security Level for this specific folder. If you just want to detect vulnerabilities, there is no need to create a rule, you can just skip the specified folder. Note: The specific location is only needed if you want to create your own rules, i.e. no existing rules should be overwritten.
