For example, to add a new background to an image, you would create a selection of the background color and then copy it to a new layer (see Step 1 in Figure 5-14). When you want to add a new layer, you may not want to create a new layer. If so, click and drag the layer directly onto the image. Figure 5-14: You can add layers to an image and move them

next Image 1 of 2 prev Image 2 of 2 One of the most famous scientists in the field of particle physics has died, his wife says. Lomonosov Moscow State University said Wednesday that 68-year-old Igor Dmitriev died overnight. The university said Dmitriev had been an employee of the university since 1992 and its rector since 2010. Dmitriev's wife, Inna Dmitrieva, told the Associated Press that the couple had been in the final stages of planning their summer vacation before his death. He had been feeling unwell for a few days. A native of St. Petersburg, Dmitriev was a prominent experimental physicist who in the 1980s set a worldwide record for penetrating the Earth's atmosphere with his particle accelerator. He then dedicated his career to efforts to detect a hypothetical particle called a "chargino" — the lightest supersymmetric partner of the known particles. He was first awarded the title of Russian National Hero in 2004. Parthenogenesis in the zebra loach, Misgurnus fossilis (Pisces, Cyprinodontidae). Parthenogenesis occurred in a natural population of Misgurnus fossilis at the Kengteng River near Hekou, Chongqing, China. A pair of individuals, morphologically normal eggs were observed, which had been deposited in a Kengteng River tributary. From 2015 to 2017, a total of 51 individuals were caught, including 44 fertile, one unfertile and one parthenogenetic female. Based on the individual structure of the gonad, they were divided into two groups: the mature and immature males and the mature and immature females. The gonadal histological sections revealed that the oocyte at the anthesis stage had a diplotene oocyte, whereas the oocyte at the diplotene stage had an elongated nucleus and a large nucleus. All the parthenogenetic females had oocytes with large nucleus and a degenerated body, which was consistent with the diplotene stage oocyte. Based on the relationship of haploid to diploid chromosome configurations of the same type and the presence of different species in the parthenogenetic fish, it was speculated that parthenogenesis in M. fossilis is the result of asexual reproduction by the hybridization of two different haploid types. Q: Can't get favicon to work on my page I'm trying to add a favicon to my site, but am not able to get it to work. I've copy and pasted the code from a few different examples and I've tried a number of variations on how to load the html, but nothing is working. Does anyone have any ideas? I'm not using .htaccess because I don't want to change the favicon for the whole domain. EDIT - I should also note that the HTML generated by WordPress, a share of which I'm modifying, can be seen here: Thanks.

A: I was able to get it working by adding a "/wp-includes/images/favicon.ico" to the HEAD section of my .htaccess file. It's probably not very good practice, but it works. Q: How to solve the recursion when the binary operation + is represented as =>? I am learning my way through the SML book. A practical coding exercise from there asks to write a function that gets two lists of positive integers and a binary operation on positive integers. The binary operation is represented as =>. I've done the function for the cases where there is only one list and the function outputs the items in the first list. Now I'm trying to write a function that takes two lists, an operation and a base. For a base of 2, the function should take the sum of the numbers in the first list. The function should be written as a binary recursion (otherwise I would have to write it in a loop and that wouldn't be as straight forward). Now I'm stuck with the case where there are two lists and the base is 1. I've tried to solve the problem by trying to factorise the base, but I'm getting stuck with the + function. I don't want to add the numbers in the two lists. I want to add them and keep the two lists of positive integers separate. I've been trying to write the function like this: fun plus (f:[>] ; list1, base) (list2:>; list2, a):[>_] = if length list2
