History Arrangeal was once a part of an ancient Mahasamudram (Maha-Sama) shipping route linking the island of Salsette to the mainland through KamaraJarasthi Yatra, an annual pilgrimage. The ancient Mahasamudram route was mainly used for pilgrims and tourists at that time. In recent times, the arrangemental part of this route has been reduced to two places: Jettanemo (Juttananemo) and Bangar (Bangar), which are apart in a straight line. The sound scape of this route is a long winding canal with an island link connecting the two parts of the route. The canal is formed by little small lakes with the help of artificial formation.

Philip Carey Phillip Gerard Carey (7 November 1823 – 3 January 1902) was a noted and popular English athlete who was prominent in tennis, rackets, cricket, football, boxing, and horseracing, who played for England, representing Oxford University, and as a member of the Christ Church team at the University, he captained the Oxford and Cambridge sides in 1846, and in 1848 added a match against Cambridge and Oxford on the Oxford and Cambridge Boat Race. At least one commentator, the journalist John Wilson, "the Traitor", wrote of Carey's profligacy and poor judgment and, unusually in the sport of horseracing, declared that he was an outsider for a championship race. Nonetheless, in winning the Great Eastern Handicap in November 1841
