Model SE-S084 External DVD/RW Writer Size: 2TB.Capillary electrophoresis-solid-phase extraction and spectrofluorimetric method for the determination of some phenolic antioxidants in vegetables and tomato. The present paper describes a new chromatographic method, based on the use of CE-solid-phase extraction (SPE), and spectrofluorimetric detection for the determination of several phenolic antioxidants in vegetables and tomato. (E)-resveratrol and (E)-resveratrol 3-O-glucoside have been detected and quantified for the first time in these vegetables. The method involves the use of 5-mg Lupeol as internal standard. The mobile phase was 10 mM sodium borate, pH 11.4, using 1350 cm(3) of (100% methanol), and the separation was carried out by CE with a BGE of 70 mM SDS and 150 mM boric acid at a temperature of 20 degrees C. Using this separation conditions, (E)-resveratrol was separated from some polyphenolic compounds present in the extracts. Phenolic compounds were isolated from vegetables and tomato juices by a SPE process. The main advantages of the method proposed consist of avoiding the use of toxic reagents, such as HPLC columns, derivatizing reagents, a large consumption of water for extractions and the reduction of analysis time. The validation of the method showed good linearity in all the cases (R(2)>0.9980), detection limits in the range of 0.19-3.25 microg mL(-1), and relative standard deviations in the range of 0.2-0.9%. The method has been successfully applied to the analysis of several samples of lettuce, red pepper and tomato.Abrasive grit is used in the manufacture of many parts used in the automotive industry. For example, abrasive grit may be used in the manufacture of camshaft assemblies. In a camshaft assembly, a camshaft lobe is formed on a workpiece. The workpiece includes an abrasive grit layer deposited over a camshaft bore. If abrasive particles are not uniformly distributed over the surface of the layer, the coating will not adequately grind the surface of the workpiece. Uniform distribution of the abrasive particles is usually difficult to achieve in a vehicle, particularly an automotive vehicle,
