If $n = 1$ this is clear since for a curve we have $\int (c'(s), c'(t)) = \int |c'(u)| du$ so it makes sense to talk about length. But if $n > 1$, then $\int (c(s), c(t))^2 = \int |c'(u)|^2 du e \int |c'(u)| du$ and we have $\int (c(s), c(t))$ and $\int (c(u), c(t))$ are not even comparable. In the $n = 1$ case, it is easy to show that the curve cannot be too flat, since it would have to be C^1 and $c' > 0$. How can one show that a C^1 curve with $|c'| > 0$ cannot be too flat? (I'm talking about an analytic definition of flatness) A: A curve is flat if the equation $|c''| = 0$ implies that c'' vanishes for each s in \mathbb{R}
