"We are seeing a great response from our fans all around the world and are eager to see how players will be able to take advantage of the enhanced game play," said Gregg Mattison, Vice President of Marketing for Electronic Arts, responsible for the FIFA franchise. "We will continue to work closely with clubs, players and development staff throughout the development process to ensure that we deliver an amazing game that fans will play for years to come." "FIFA offers world-class football and now it gives us the opportunity to make it more cinematic and immersive," said Philippe Lanctôt, Creative Director at DICE. "With HyperMotion Technology, we can deliver player animations with natural fluidity and movement, as well as more fluid passing and shooting." New Signature Moments and Player Abilities Real-life player data that has been collected from numerous high-intensity matches, including training sessions, is used to generate behavior-based animations, detailed physical interactions, and authentic visual behaviors. For example, when receiving a pass, players are asked to cover the ball with their body at full speed and be physically and visually realistic. The animation library was gathered using two full simulation matches with the team of over 100 real-life players. Players will now be able to use Player Agency. All players will now have their own unique attributes, strengths and weaknesses, which are reflected in-game. The system will also provide players with more defensive options, as well as more consistent timing of Player Intelligence with situational awareness. FIFA 21 introduced "Pass One Touch," which requires a player to move his or her body, make a precise input and then immediately pass the ball, similar to how a player would check a pass. With Pass One Touch, the ball will fly through a player's feet to the intended target. Gameplay data from real-life movement has been gathered. Goalkeepers and Defenders will now be able to slide in a more realistic way. For example, defenders will be able to slide in from the side, even if they haven't touched the ball. The proprietary Attacking Intelligence engine (AIE) uses the same data that's been collected from these "player motion captures" to engage in real-time simulations, capturing precise players movements to offer a more fluid and authentic gameplay. HyperMotion offers "realism in
