Download this file to EMS SQL Manager for Oracle 2011 Crack.Q: Passing a Python Script a Function from another script I have two scripts, one.py is a python script that runs a function, writes an entry to a txt file. And two, b.py runs the function, and loops that function 10 times, while printing to the txt file. My issue is that the output I get from the script is the looping

10 times but nothing when it writes to the txt file. script.py:
import b
b.twirl()
def twirl():
for i in range(10):
print("Text written to data")
script2.py:
from script import twirl
while True:
twirl()
I expect that when it runs, it will print "Text written to data" 10 times. When I run script2.py, it prints nothing. How do I pass the function from script.py from script2.py? A: b is
