Roblox is an online gaming website that enables players to make their own games using a drag-and-drop user interface or using written code for more complex projects. The website is free to use, but users can purchase virtual currency called Robux, which can be used to purchase game items. Roblox serves as the company's source of revenue by generating advertising and other revenue based on in-game purchases using Robux. The game was created by David Baszucki and Erik Cassel in 2004 and was publicly released as a beta in February 2006. The website was launched into beta at the same time. Roblox was opened to the public in 2006; the subscription fee was waived at first, but was added afterward. Roblox has been free to play since 2007. Roblox video: Roblox channel: published:29 Apr 2020 views:5610127 Jump to the top to see more content. Roblox is an online game platform and game creation system developed by Roblox Corporation that allows users to program games and play games created by other users. Created by David Baszucki and Erik Cassel in 2004 and released in 2006, the platform hosts user-created games of multiple genres coded in the programming language Lua. For most of Roblox's history, it was relatively small, both as a platform and a company. Roblox began to grow rapidly in the second half of the 2010s, and this growth has been accelerated by the COVID-19 pandemic. Roblox is free to play, with in-game purchases available through a virtual currency called Robux. As of August 2020, Roblox had over 164 million monthly active users, including more than half of all American children under 16. Although Roblox has received generally positive reviews from critics, it has faced criticism for its moderation, microtransactions, and exploitative practices directed toward children.

The names of hundreds of children and youth in Ontario who were trapped in the homes of traffickers were erased during a massive summer-long police and social services drive in May 2016, according to a provincial freedom of information request. The report, written by the OPP Missing and Exploited Children's Unit, explains the number of missing and exploited children in Ontario is more than 40,000, and is on the rise. It also tells of an estimated 4,100 children and youth, about 5 per cent of total missing and exploited children and youth in the province, who are runaways. More than 120 runaway youth aged 15 to 24 have been killed by police in recent years, the report said. "This problem is not going away," the report said. Two recommendations were made by the report: Every mayor, judge and cabinet member should have a personal role in preventing the exploitation of children. and A proactive outreach program to identify runaways and youth at risk of recruitment for the sex trade, improve services for them and then ensure follow-up surveillance and referrals. In another case, Regina police were investigating two sexual assaults on the same night. They arrested a man and woman who were out with friends in a park. Before he was taken to jail, the man left a message for his mother saying he was being taken to the police station. When police went to the home where the mother said she lived, they learned the woman and the man had had a relationship for about two years. His mother told police they had been in a relationship for about five years, and had a child together. She said the mother knew the man, by his birth name, had charges pending but she had no idea he had a criminal record. The mother said she had never known him to be violent or have any violent tendencies. The mother said the father was a contractor, and that he left the home about two years ago. She said she had recently learned her son had a new address, and would have to go get his things. During a home visit, police found a young man, who they determined was 13 years old. The man said he would be 14 on June 17. His mother told police the father of the boy was now deceased. In the course of police interviews, the 13 year old told police of being raped by the man and woman
