Introduce the section with a subheading

Data mining is a progressive method for extracting information from massive amounts of readily available data. The data is analyzed using statistical models, artificial intelligence techniques, mathematical algorithms, and machine learning methods, which improve the precision and efficiency of data analysis techniques. The goal of data mining is to find insights and knowledge from data that can be used to make better decisions or to support decision-making processes. Data mining techniques are used in several fields, including business, finance, healthcare, marketing, and scientific research.
